INSTITUTIONAL DISTINCTIVENESS

Strong Footprint of Gender Equality and Empowerment

Gender equality is not only a fundamental human right, but a necessary foundation for a peaceful, prosperous and sustainable world.

In a society, everyone has the right to lead his/her life accordingly without any discrimination. The most prevalent discrimination is gender inequality. The perception is changing slowly but steadily. A society attains better development in all aspects when both genders are entitled to similar opportunity. Developed countries have comparatively less gender discrimination and provide equal opportunity to both genders. The Indian government is taking multiple initiatives to cut down gender discrimination.
